Summary

A company's employees, contractors, and vendors increasingly come into direct contact with its computers and IP. This computer access can result in litigation for the unwary and unprepared. This program will discuss California and Federal statutes and laws governing computer access and misuse, including when litigation commonly arises, ways to avoid misunderstandings about access and misuse, and how to make and respond to claims under these laws.

Topics

- Federal and California Computer Crime and Misuse Laws
- Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, California Comprehensive Computer Data Access and Fraud Act, Stored Communications Act, Digital Millennium Copyright Act, and more
- Computer Crimes by Employees and Ex-Employees
- Remedies Available for Companies
- Drafting Agreements that Protect Rights of Access
