Trade secret discovery is an increasingly complex space, with more and more vectors through which individuals can intentionally or accidentally take confidential business information. Employees have access to more devices than ever before, as business information is stored across work devices, personal devices, internal networks, and cloud service providers. Learn the ins and outs of trade secret discovery and trade secret litigation at this lunchtime event!

Topics

- Search, preservation, and remediation of employees' personal and work devices before and during litigation.
- Offensive discovery of electronically stored information in trade secret litigation.
- Sanctions for destruction of electronically stored information in trade secret cases.
- Considerations for multi-cloud collections in trade secret cases.
- Metadata issues in trade secret cases, including overview of differing tools collecting different metadata or kinds of files.
