What considerations do companies need to be mindful of when expanding beyond headquarters, internationally? For foreign companies coming to the United States, when does it make sense to set up a subsidiary or perform a DE flip? For American companies expanding their workforce abroad, what kind of employment, immigration, and intellectual property concerns apply? When does setting up an entity such as a subsidiary abroad make sense, versus using a PEO?

Topics

- Why some foreign companies may set up subsidiaries versus flip when coming to the United States;
- What American companies need to know when expanding or hiring abroad in Europe and Asia in terms of employment, immigration, and intellectual property protection;
- Tax ramifications of cross-border operations; and
- When setting up a PEO is advisable or not.
