The California Law Revision Commission is conducting studies to determine whether the California Antitrust Laws should be revised. Those revisions could impact the way California courts analyze monopolies, antitrust injury in the context of technology companies, and approvals for mergers and acquisitions. Hear directly from those in working groups and who have been following these issues closely to understand what the Commission has recommended, next steps in the process, and the potential impact of the Commission's study.

Topics

- Why the legislature authorized the Study
- Overview of the California Law Revision Commission working groups
- Status and summary of working group reports and next steps
- Potential impact of working group reports and recommendations
- The most significant recommendations
